A group of people, including children and adults, are standing in a forest. They are looking towards a large, light-colored tree trunk. The scene is captured through a rounded rectangular frame, which is set against a dark, gradient background. The text "Be Sensitive to yourself, our environment and each other." is overlaid on the image.

Be Sensitive to yourself,
our environment and
each other.

An aerial photograph showing a village that has been severely damaged, likely by a disaster. The ground is covered in a thick layer of rubble, including broken wooden planks, concrete slabs, and twisted metal. Several buildings are visible, many of which are partially collapsed or heavily damaged. In the background, more structures and some trees are visible, though the overall scene is one of devastation. The text is overlaid on the upper half of the image.
